

The “Criminal Law and Procedure” program is designed to train highly qualified specialists with a deep understanding of criminal legislation, judicial practice, and the application of criminal law norms in various legal situations. The program covers a wide range of issues related to criminal offenses, criminal investigations, and court proceedings.

Within the program, students study key aspects of criminal law, including the classification of crimes, types of punishments, procedural stages of criminal proceedings, and legal guarantees for the protection of citizens’ rights and freedoms. Special emphasis is placed on developing practical skills such as conducting interrogations, participating in court sessions, analyzing case law, and preparing legal documents.

The program is regularly updated to reflect changes in legislation and judicial practice, ensuring that students acquire relevant knowledge and are prepared for modern challenges in the field of criminal justice. Each year, consultations are held with employers and other stakeholders to assess the effectiveness of the educational process and to adapt the program to labor market needs. This approach not only maintains the program at a high standard but also ensures that graduates are well-prepared for work in criminal justice, law enforcement, advocacy, and other areas of legal practice.

Thus, the program combines theoretical knowledge with practical skills, providing comprehensive preparation for a successful career in criminal law and procedure.
